

SOME TIME LATER...

Some Time Later is a recreation of the classic SpongeBob Squarepants™ typeface used in the credits, in the title cards of some episodes and most famously in the time cards.

CREATION NOTES

First, screenshots were collected of the typeface in action from fan wikis such as SpongeBob Wikia.

Each glyph was hand traced, no automatic tools such as Adobe Illustrator's "Image Trace" feature nor Inkscape's Do-Trace were used. This helps prevent artifacts which make the font work well even at very high point sizes.

In the event of multiple glyphs being found in the source materials for a given character, the OpenType feature "Stylistic Alternates" was used to preserve both glyphs in the font. In each case multiple samples were consulted to determine which form was the "main" form of the glyph, and which was the alternate form.

This happened with the Q and i glyphs, which have the Stylistic Alternates Q and I.

For fun, and since the source material contained a fraction in the form of "6½ HOURS LATER", the font was made further OpenType aware by adding the Diagonal Fractions feature, enable-able in fine software everywhere. This allows complex fractions such as 89⁵/₇₀₂'s to be written with ease.

COMPARISON TO THE STATE OF THE ART

A font with the same aims as this one exists on DaFont, "Krabby Patty". But its outlines are very poor, either due to poor quality of reference material or automatic tracing.

SOME TIME LATER (2016)

Some Time Later supports more than 20 languages, and has the entire Latin-1 Unicode Block in the font. Glyphs which were not part of the source material were carefully constructed based on guidance provided from other glyphs.

Other symbols, such as the Euro (€), indian Rupee (₹) and Philippine Peso sign (₱) were added as well. "Krabby Patty" (2012) doesn't support any language but English.

LICENSE

Best of all, this font is 100% free for use in any work, personal or commercial, in the United States, due to the decision in Eltra Corp vs. Ringer, typeface designs are not copyrightable. Since this font is not based on any prior font software (due to Krabby Patty being very low quality and the typeface from Nickelodeon being available nowhere online), this font can be released for free, and so is.

This font is licensed under the SIL Open Font License, full text of which is available either in the archive or at <http://scripts.sil.org/OFL>

Please note that typeface protections notwithstanding, you are still under obligation of international trademark and copyright law, especially if this font is used in a commercial product. The Eltra Corp decision won't save you if you sell this font printed out on unlicensed SpongeBob™ themed merchandise, so stick to non-Nickelodeon uses. 🙏

All of that said, I hope that you enjoy using this font as much as I enjoyed making it. :)
